RECEIVES A LETTER. FROM WU TING FANG

Country to C. C. Haskell.

Charles Courtney Haskell received an interesting letter from Wu Ting Fang, showing his unbounded faith in his country. He writes:

Secontry, He writes:

Gordron Road, Shanghai, China,

4th September, 1912.

My Dear Mr. Haskell: Your letter

February 18th was duly received.

I have been so busy as you can infer from the stirring times we have passed through that I have not had any time to attend to my private correspondence. I will endeavor to do so now. I am glad that you take so much interest in what is going on in China. The recent revolution and the establishment of the Republic of China testified plainly the fact that the world is moving, and all the nations on this earth, however conservative some may be, cannot escape from its action.
The law of evolution has been active in China. Nations as well as individuals must move and advance and cannot stand still. I hope your prophecy concerning the great world movement during the next ten years will come true.

What have you been doing as re-

what have you been doing as regards new thought work? Do you feel as healthy as ever, and as free from sickness and worry? I am at present taking a little rest after my arduous and troublesome work, but I can say that I am in good health as I should be.

With kind regards,
Yours truly,
WU TING FANG.

Last Man in the Stocks.

Last Man in the Stocks.

The punishment of the stocks has been inflicted within the memory of many living men. In the Manchester Guardian of June 14, 1872, there is an account of a man enduring this form of legal torture at Newbury. He was a rag and bone dealer of intemperate habits and was fixed in the stocks for drunk and disorderly conduct at the drunk and disorderly conduct at the parish church.

"Twenty-six years had elapsed since the stocks were last used," runs the account, "and their reappearance created no little sensation and amuse ment, several hundreds of persons be ing attracted to the spot where they were fixed." The "amusement" does not appear to have been shared by the prisoner, who was released after four hours, and "seemed anything but pleased with the laughter and deristion of the crowd."—The London Chronicle.

The superior court was engaged all day with the triel of the Supreme lodge, N. E. O. P., vs. Louise J Joyce, an action to determine the payment of insurance on the life of Daniel B. Joyce. The action is an interpleder between the administrator of the estate of Daniel B. Joyce, formerly of Torrington, and his wife, against the Supreme lodge of the New England Order of Protection. Joyce had a policy made in favor of his former wife. She died and he transferred the policy to be payable to his eister. Later Joyce married a second time and made over the insurance on his life to his second wife without the formality of getting possession of the policy that antedated the one to his second wife. Eight or nine miles below Mandalay, in Burma, the right bank of the Irrawaddy is hilly, and in the neighborhood of the old Burmese town of Sagaing the hills are dotted all over with pagodas. These are not temples (says a writer in the September Wide World Magazine), but are built by plous people as offerings to the supreme power, it being generally believed that such acts of devotion count to the hullders' credit in the next world. The pagodas are of all kinds, according to the means of the builders, from primitive whitewashed strucaccording to the means of the builders, from primitive whitewashed structures to ornate erections with grotesque gilded lions. The lions have various meanings, but stand chiefly as a reminder of unselfish devotion. An ancient Burmese legend, taught to all Burmese children, is that of a lioness who nursed and guarded the baby son of a king and who died of a broken heart when the prince grew up and went away.
